Rethinking the World looks at dramatic new departures in the thinking of great powers—America's and Japan's emergence from isolationism; Gorbachev's 'new thinking' that ended the Cold War; Germany's break with its Nazi past—and shows how external shocks combined with domestic politics and the pre-existing stock of ideas about the world to determine whether change would happen and whether the change would stick. This book's fruitful, balanced approach will be a welcome ...

"Rethinking the World: Great Power Strategies and ...

A new paradigm for power sector reform emerged during the 1990s, under the influence of the Washington Consensus, and began to spread across the developing world. This approach advocated restructuring of national power utilities to create scope for competition, while delegating responsibilities to the private sector under a clear regulatory
